- 2.2 The Police and Crime Commissioner has delegated the responsibility for the management of Health and Safety for the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner to the Chief Executive.

3.0 Introduction

[FOIA Open]

- 3.1 All workers have a right to work in places where risks to their health and safety are properly controlled. Health and safety is about stopping people from getting hurt at work or ill through work.
- 3.2 The Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner fully commits to embracing the principles of the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974, the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999, Workplace (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992, and other relevant health and safety provisions and recognised codes of practice.
- 3.3 By embracing these principles and promoting and managing health and safety at work, the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner will enhance its performance through reduced absence, injuries and ill health.
- 3.4 Our workers are our most valuable resource and, as such, we commit to ensuring work activities are conducted in a manner that will, so far as is reasonably practicable, protect their health, safety and welfare.
- 3.5 We make the same commitment to the Police and Crime Commissioner, our volunteers, and others working at or visiting our premises, others acting in fulfilment of the Police and Crime Commissioner's functions and any members of the public likely to be affected by his / her work.
- 3.6 The Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 provides a comprehensive structure for regulating health and safety in the workplace and aims to secure and improve standards of health, safety and welfare of people at work, and to protect the health and safety of others who are affected by people at work. It places a general duty on employers to safeguard the health and safety of their employees and others affected by their undertakings. It also places a duty on employees to take reasonable care of their own health and safety and others who are affected by their actions, and to co-operate with their employers in complying with the health and safety law.
- 3.7 This policy complements and supports the joint Health and Safety Policy Statement signed by the Police and Crime Commissioner and the Chief Constable .
- 3.8 Both the Chief Executive and his / her employees have particular responsibilities for health and safety.

- 3.9 The Police and Crime Commissioner, and any deputies also have a responsibility to adhere to the precepts of this policy whilst carrying out their business.
- 3.10 In addition, the Police and Crime Commissioner is responsible for the delivery of independent custody visiting which is undertaken by volunteers, and also appoints other volunteers, and public appointees to deliver specific functions, for example Police Misconduct Panel members. The HSW Act sets out the general duties that employers have towards employees. It also requires employers and the self-employed to protect people other than those at work (eg members of the public and volunteers) from risks to their health and safety arising out of, or in connection with, their work activities.. For example Volunteers and appointed individuals may in exercising their responsibilities, attend premises over which the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner does not hold responsibility. The Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner has a responsibility to check that those in control of those premises have instituted risk assessment processes and take appropriate action to eliminate or minimise risks that are identified.
- 3.11 Volunteers and others acting in fulfilment of the Police and Crime Commissioner's functions have a responsibility to act upon any advice or instruction that they are provided with in respect of risks that are identified. Under the common law, individuals also have a duty of care to each other and others who may be affected by their activities. All police officers, police staff, members of the special constabulary and police support volunteers irrespective of their rank, grade or position within Devon & Cornwall Police have a personal responsibility and a unique and valuable contribution to make for health and safety. All individuals are expected to cooperate fully in the achievement of this policy and understand their legal responsibilities to take reasonable care of the health and safety of themselves and those other persons who may be affected by what they do, or fail to do at work.

While health and safety legislation sets minimum standards for organisations, Devon & Cornwall Police and the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner are committed to promoting a culture of health and safety in our organisation and, so far as is reasonably practicable, to continually improve upon our health and safety performance through better management processes and a framework of audit, inspection, review and monitoring.
