2.0 Policy Statement

- 2.1 The Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner is committed to the whole life management of records which document the principal activities of the organisation and that meet business needs, accountability requirements and stakeholder expectations. It will ensure that records are retained for as long as they are needed and then, when they are no longer needed, will destroy them in an appropriate manner or dispose of them in some other appropriate way such as by transfer to an archives service. In addition, the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner is committed to the principles and practices set out in the whole of Government policies and best practice standards.

3.0 Purpose and Scope

- 3.1 The purpose of this policy is to provide guidance and direction to the retention and disposal of information and records, and to clarify staff responsibilities.
- 3.2 It provides a corporate policy framework to govern management decisions on whether a particular record or document (or set of records and documents) should either be:
- Retained – and if so in what format, and for what period; or
 - Disposed of - and if so when and by what method.
- 3.3 This policy is not concerned with the disposal / retention of unused materials (e.g.stocks of paper, unused forms, duplicated documents)

3.4 The policy applies to all staff within the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner, and to agency, associated and affiliated workers. It incorporates all relevant documents and records (recorded information) whatever the medium or technology used to create and store it and whether it originates from within the organisation or from outside. It also covers documents and records stored on behalf of the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner by an external body (for example the Police Force).

3.5 In the course of carrying out its functions and activities, the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner collects information from individuals and external organisations and creates a wide range of data and information which is recorded. These records can take many different forms e.g.

- Formal decision sheets
- Correspondence (including email communication and attachments)
- Forms (including equality monitoring forms)
- Consultation data and responses
- Briefings, agendas reports, minutes
- Policies, procedures, guidance and manuals
- Plans, strategies, frameworks, roadmaps
- Research
- Financial records
- Audit reports
- Tenders, contracts, deeds, grants, agreements
- Recruitment, training, personnel and other HR records
- Press releases, blogs, newsletters and promotional materials
- Contact lists
- Registers and logs

3.6 Retention of specific documents may be necessary to:

- Fulfil statutory or other regulatory requirements.
- Evidence events/agreements/decisions for transparency purposes, and in the case of disputes.
- Ensure the preservation of documents of historic or other value.

The types of records likely to be selected for permanent preservation include key documents relating to:

- Corporate planning and reporting
- Strategic decisions
- Financial accounting
- Public and workforce liability
- Records management

3.7 The Freedom of Information Act requires that the Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner has clearly defined policies and procedures in place for disposing of records, and that these are well documented.

3.8 The untimely destruction of documents could frustrate processes, cause embarrassment to the Police and Crime Commissioner and result in failure to comply with the Freedom of Information or Data Protection Acts.

3.9 However, the permanent retention of all documents is undesirable, and a managed disposal process has several benefits:

- it avoids unnecessary storage costs incurred by using office or server space to maintain records no longer needed by the organisation
- it supports compliance with article 5(1)(e) of the GDPR (this article requires organisations not to keep personal information for longer than necessary)
- finding and retrieving information is quicker and easier because there is less to search and it enables the identification of the definitive version of a document.
- responding to Freedom of Information (FOI) requests is more efficient.

3.10 The benefits of retention schedules are:

- documents and records of continuing value are identified and can be managed appropriately
- documents and records which cease to have any value to the organisation or as archives can be disposed of efficiently
- clear instructions on what happens to documents and records when they are no longer needed to support the business
- definitive periods of time for which documents and records should be kept and remain accessible
- consistency in retention of documents and records across the organisation
- evidence of compliance with legal and regulatory requirements for the retention of records
- evidence of what documents and records were created but subsequently destroyed.

3.11 The effective application of this policy will require that on the development or revision of any policy or working practice the author considers the impact of records management of the new/revised policy and associated working practices. The records generated by the application of the new/revised policy need to have relevant review/retention periods established and recorded within the attached Retention schedule.

4.0 The retention / disposal protocol

4.1 Any decision whether to retain or dispose of a document should be taken in accordance with the retention/disposal protocol. This protocol consists of:

- The key disposal/retention considerations criteria checklist, set out in Appendix 1. Essentially no document should be disposed of unless all these have been considered in relation to the document (or set of records and documents).

- The Retention Schedules contained in Appendix 2. These provide guidance on recommended and mandatory minimum retention periods for specific classes of documents/records.

5.0 Roles & responsibilities

- 5.1 Responsibility for determining (in accordance with the Retention/Disposal protocol mentioned above) whether to retain or dispose of specific documents rests with the Chief Executive.
- 5.2 The rationale for this is that the Chief Executive is the Data Controller under Data Protection legislation and it is reasonable to both assume and expect that the Chief Executive should be broadly conversant with the types of documents received, generated and stored by the office.
- 5.3 The Chief Executive may delegate the operational aspects of this function to one or more senior officers within the office. However in so doing they should ensure that any such Officer is fully conversant with this Policy.

6.0 Disposal

- 6.1 Disposal can be achieved by a range of processes:
- Confidential waste' – i.e. making available for collection by a designated refuse collection service or use of the orange bag service
 - Physical destruction on site (paper records - shredding)
 - Deletion – where computer files are concerned
 - Migration of document to external body
- 6.2 Special care must be taken with electronic records, which can be reconstructed from deleted information.
- 6.3 The deletion of electronic media must be organised via the Force central file store, who will ensure the removal of all data from the medium so that it cannot be reconstructed.
- 6.3 Deletion should ultimately mean the complete destruction of the electronic record. This implies rendering data non-recoverable even when using forensic data recovery techniques. In practice, deleting an instance of an electronic record in most technical environments merely removes an operating system or application link to the object and it is not actually removed when the same storage medium space has been reused several times over.
- 6.4 Data protection legislation requires that information that is no longer required should cease to be processed. The Information Commissioner has held that this means that reasonable steps should be taken to ensure the information is not retrievable by normal methods, including restoring using backup facilities. Additionally, it is important to ensure that external IT providers do not frustrate the proper implementation of OPCC disposal schedules by their own back-up routines.

- 6.5 In view of the technical issues involved in deleting electronic records, the Force Head of IT shall be responsible for administering the removal of electronic records, including back-up mechanisms.
- 6.6 Paper records containing confidential and/or personal information must be cross-cut shredded no larger than 6mm and confidentially disposed of. Under no circumstances should confidential and/or personal information be disposed of with other rubbish or general records. To do so could result in the unauthorised disclosure of such information to third parties, and render the Police and Crime Commissioner liable to prosecution or other enforcement action under Data Protection laws. Bulk shredding and confidential disposal can be arranged through the orange bag system.
- 6.7 The following should be taken into account when selecting any method of disposal:
- Migration of documents to a third party (other than for destruction or recycling) - this is unlikely to be an option in most cases, however, this method of disposal will be relevant where documents or records are of historic interest and/or have intrinsic value. The third party here could well be the Public Record Office ("PRO") or Force Museum.
 - Recycling – wherever practicable disposal should favour recycling, in-line with the Police and Crime Commissioner's commitment to sustainable development.
- 6.8 Disposal should be documented by keeping a record of the specified types of documents of a specified age range destroyed in accordance with the relevant provision in the disposal schedule, and should include a description, the date and method of disposal.

7.0 Data Protection Legislation

- 7.1 Under Data Protection Legislation personal data processed for any purpose must not be kept for longer than is necessary for that purpose (storage limitation). In other words, retaining documents or records that contain personal data beyond the length of time necessary for the purpose for which that data was obtained is unlawful.
- 7.2 The Data Protection Legislation contains no interpretive provisions on this provision. It is a matter for reasonable judgement and common sense as to how long personal data should be retained.
- 7.3 Clearly, in many instances the retention of personal data will be necessary and thus justified for a very long period of time. In general provided there is adherence to this Policy few problems should arise.

8.0 Communication and Training

8.1 This policy will be communicated to all staff, contractors, agency, associated and affiliated workers as appropriate, and training will be provided to relevant workgroups on aspects of the policy. The training will be up to date, regular, and tailored to workgroups as appropriate.

9.0 Supporting documents

9.1 This policy is supported by key disposal / retention considerations and information retention and disposal schedules which are appended.

10.0 Monitoring and review

10.1 This policy will be updated as needed if there are any changes in the business or regulatory environment. It is scheduled for a comprehensive review by 2016. This review will be initiated by the Chief Executive and conducted by an internal committee of senior management.

10.2 The Chief Executive, line managers and individuals each have responsibility in ensuring the successful and consistent delivery of this policy, and supporting standards, procedures and guidelines.

10.3 Compliance with this policy will be monitored by the Office Manager (with the support of workplace Managers). Levels of compliance will be reported at least annually to senior management.

11.0 Audit Compliance

11.1 This policy has been drafted and audited to comply with the principles of the Human Rights Act. Equality and diversity issues have also been considered to ensure compliance with equality legislation and policies. In addition Data Protection, Freedom of Information, and Health and Safety issues have been considered. Adherence to this policy will therefore ensure compliance with all relevant legislation and internal policies. Under the Freedom of Information Act 2000, the document is classified as 'OPEN'.

12.0 Ownership

12.1 This policy is owned by the Office of the Police & Crime Commissioner.

13. Definitions

13.1 Retention schedule -a set of rules identifying classes of records and specifying their retention periods and what should happen to them at the end of that period.

13.2 Documents - a document can be defined as information stored as a single entity on some medium e.g. paper or computer drive.

13.3 Records - a record can be defined as a document which has content, context and structure and contains information 'created received and maintained as evidence and information by an organisation or person, in pursuance of legal obligations or in the transaction of business'. [International Standards

Organisation ISO 15489 Information and documentation: Records management, two volumes 2001]

- 13.4 Records derive from documents, all records will be documents, but not all documents will be records.

Appendix 1 - Key Disposal/Retention Considerations

Documents for regular disposal

Some records and documents will contain information that is not useful for retention. Such documentation should be disposed of when its business requirement is complete. Documents of this nature might include:

- Out of date distribution lists
- Working papers
- Duplicated or superseded material such as guidance, manuals, drafts
- Telephone messaging slips
- Catalogues and journals
- Non-acceptance of invitations
- Requests for standard information provided by the OPCC including routine email traffic
- External documentation owned by other bodies e.g. external meeting papers.
- Templates and forms

Retention periods

All other records and document types must have an allocated retention period and should be maintained and disposed of in accordance with this policy. Disposal of records applies to both electronic and paper documents.

Considerations

No documents should be earmarked for disposal unless due regard has first been given to

- (i) the five Key Disposal/Retention considerations detailed in Appendix 1, and
- (ii) the Retention Schedules contained in Appendix 2.

Appendix 1

1. HAS THE DOCUMENT BEEN APPRAISED?

No document(s) should be earmarked or designated for disposal unless it has been physically inspected and appraised to determine the nature/contents.

For existing documents this can only be achieved by the carrying out of a physical inspection and appraisal. Depending on the complexity of the document concerned, this is a skilled task and therefore should only be undertaken by officers who possess sufficient knowledge to enable them to identify the document concerned and its function.

Any decision to the effect that future documents of a specified description be disposed of on expiry of a specified retention period should be taken with a full appreciation and understanding of the nature and function of such document.

2. IS RETENTION REQUIRED TO FULFIL STATUTORY OR OTHER REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS?

The pieces of legislation which do, either directly or indirectly, impose minimum retention periods include:

- Tax legislation: Minimum retention period for certain financial records are imposed by statutes such as the VAT Act 1994, the Taxes Management Act 1970 and Income Tax Regulations 2003 and includes all information relevant to the tax position.
- Statutory Registers: Various local government statutes require registers to be kept of certain events, notifications, or transactions. It is implicit within such legislative requirement that these records be maintained on a permanent basis, unless the legislation concerned stipulates otherwise.
- Local Audit and Accountability Act 2014 – the duty to provide documents and information to the auditors, which it appears necessary to enable them to discharge their functions under the Act.
- Health and Safety Acts and Regulations: There is a raft of legislation under Health and Safety that requires the retention of records which include accident records, risk assessments, working time opt out forms, RIDDOR reports, training, staff consultation etc.
- Financial Acts and Regulations: Various legislation require the retention of financial information including accounts, financial statements, audit reports.
- Limitation Act 1980: Prescribes time limits for the commencement of different categories of legal actions, and hence encompasses contracts including employment contracts, training records, particulars of employment, changes to terms and conditions.
- Personnel/Human Resource legislation: various legislation requires the retention of records including working time records, statutory maternity pay records, retirement benefits records, statutory sick pay records, calculations, certificates and self-certificates.

Other relevant legislation includes:

- GDPR and the Data Protection Act 2018 which states that personal data shall be 'kept in a form which permits identification of data subjects for no longer than is necessary for the purposes for which the personal data are processed' Public records Act 1958 imposes a duty on public bodies to make proper arrangements for the identification, safeguarding and transfer of records of historical interest to the National Archives.

For some documents and records there is national guidance indicating a retention period, including:

- CIPD Retention of personnel and other related records: Specifies retention periods for job application forms, /CVs, references, job interview notes, etc.
- Lord Chancellor's Code of Practice on the Management of Records under Freedom of Information
- The National Archives: provides best practice in records management and transfer, and information re-use.

This list is not exhaustive but represents legislation that most often applies.

3 IS RETENTION REQUIRED TO EVIDENCE EVENTS IN THE CASE OF DISPUTE?

Where a dispute arises, or litigation has been commenced it is important that the Police and Crime Commissioner has access to all correspondence and other documentation that is relevant to the matter.

The Limitations Act 1980 specifies time limits for commencing litigation. The starting point therefore, is that the retention period is the length of time that has to elapse before a claim is barred.

The six-year retention period and risk assessment: The majority of potential legal claims are statute barred on the expiry of 6 years. For this reason many organisations consider it prudent to retain files/records for a period of 6 years from the date when the subject matter was completed.

Many documents will relate to completed matters where the risk of subsequent litigation or other dispute is minimal or non-existent. Long-term retention of such documents is counterproductive. In such cases a risk analysis should be undertaken with a view to disposal of such documents within a shorter period than the 6 years time frame.

Documents or records known to be the subject of a complaint or appeal : The fact that records are known to be the subject of a complaint or appeal does not mean that the records must be kept indefinitely. Both the Information Commissioner and the Information Rights Tribunal set deadlines for submitting complaints or appeals which can be taken into account when deciding when the records can safely be destroyed (the deadlines are two months and 28 days respectively). However, both bodies reserve the right to accept late complaints or appeals and it would be advisable to allow a margin of safety, such as an additional six months, before destruction. Remember that if records are destroyed despite it being known that they are still relevant to a live case, it may be an offence under section 77 of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA).

4 IS RETENTION REQUIRED TO MEET THE OPERATIONAL NEEDS OF THE PCC?

In some cases retention may be desirable (whether permanent or otherwise) even though no minimum retention period applies or has expired. Decisions should be taken that are open to the danger of discarding documents or records that might be useful for future reference purposes (e.g. training), as precedents, or for performance management (performance indicators, benchmarking and comparison exercises).

5 IS RETENTION REQUIRED BECAUSE THE DOCUMENT OR RECORD IS OF HISTORIC INTEREST OR INTRINSIC VALUE?

Where it is suspected that the document falls within this description appropriate enquires should always be made before taking any further action. The Chief Executive should be consulted in the first instance. Consideration should be given to disposal in the form of transfer to an appropriate third party such as the National Archives, Public Record Office ("PRO") or Force Museum.

Appendix 2 - Document Retention Schedule

Introduction

The following schedule provides guidance on the retention periods applicable to records and documents created by the Police and Crime Commissioner and his / her Office .

Retention / disposal decisions in respect of documents and records not specifically covered by the following schedules should be considered against the guidelines contained in the policy and in the retention schedule, and with full regard to the key disposal / retention considerations set out in Appendix 1.

Some records are created and managed by the Police Force on behalf of the Police and Crime Commissioner, for example financial and management accounting records, pension and payroll records, tenders and contracts, buildings and estates records. For many of these records, retention periods are specified in legislation. Where legislation is silent on retention periods, it is the OPCCs policy to adhere to the retention periods detailed in the Police Force retention schedules, which is based on the Association of Chief Police Officers National Guidance on The Minimum Standards for the Retention and Disposal of Police records. The Force retention policy and schedules can be accessed through the Force Intranet.

Retention schedules

Where there is no regulatory requirement for retention / disposal, retention periods have been selected with reference to the following as examples of best practice, and with regards to business need:

- Legal Ombudsman Information and Disposal Policy 2010
- HM Treasury internal audit records management 2011
- National Archives guidance
- DCP Force retention schedules 2014
- CIPD

Where the action is 'review', using the key disposal/retention considerations criteria checklist (appendix 1) a decision will be taken to retain longer, destroy or send to archive for permanent preservation.
